A large central box displays a research paper's 'Experimental Setup/ Synthesis & Result' section. To the right is a box titled 'Overview of Research Paper' with a diagram of the research paper structure and a quote about its purpose. The bottom of the page shows social media links for Instagram (@tscsxc.r), Twitter (@TSCSX), LinkedIn (/the science club), and Email (tscsxc@gmail.com).

DATE: 2nd November, 2025

PLACE: Google Meet

The Science Club successfully conducted its Demonstration & Guidance Workshop under Project SciSearch on Sunday, 2nd November, 2025, at 7:00 PM via Google Meet.

The workshop aimed to guide students in exploring and understanding research papers and essential research methodologies.

The session received active participation from students who showed genuine enthusiasm for learning the foundations of scientific research. The workshop included interactive explanations on identifying reliable research papers, understanding major sections of a paper, extracting key observations, and developing citation and plagiarism awareness.

Throughout the workshop, participants engaged attentively as senior members of The Science Club demonstrated the process step-by-step, helping them build strong analytical and scientific reading skills. Data from the session was systematically recorded for further reference and evaluation.

This workshop served as an important foundation for students preparing for deeper research exploration in the upcoming Sci-Search Analytical Paper Contest.
